Advanced People Management Practice Training Course for Line Managers

Ref: 359_12599 Date: 25 July – 5 August 2027 Location: Doha Fees: 9900 GBP

People Management Practice for Line Managers is a 2-week training course for department heads, line managers and team leaders who carry everyday people responsibilities without an HR title, and each participant assembles a people management casebook of documented decisions and templates. Staff now judge an employer largely by how their direct manager hires, appraises, supports and corrects them. Jupiter Prime Training runs this course on People Management Practice.

Why People Management Practice Matters Now

Three pressures land on the line manager's desk. Employees expect regular, fair conversations about their performance and wellbeing rather than an annual form. HR functions have moved to advisory models, so managers now run interviews, absence cases and first-stage disciplinary meetings themselves. Internal auditors and dispute bodies look closely at whether decisions were consistent and properly recorded. Organisations whose managers handle these moments well keep good people and resolve problems early; those that do not face disputes, attrition and inconsistent treatment. The course draws on competency-based interviewing, structured onboarding, the SMART objective model and the principles of procedural fairness and natural justice.

Who Gains Most from People Management Practice

- Managers who select new joiners and decide who passes probation
- Department heads who run appraisals and agree pay and promotion recommendations with HR
- Team leaders who monitor attendance and hold return-to-work discussions
- Supervisors who hear first-stage grievances or conduct investigations
- Section leads who plan coaching, cross-training and succession cover within their unit

A leadership group from one division gains most when several members attend together and agree one shared way of applying people policies across their teams.

People Management Practice Capabilities

Participants leave able to handle the people moments of a manager's year with consistency, sound records and the confidence to involve HR at the right point.

- Design competency-based interview guides and scoring sheets — hiring decisions
- Build onboarding and probation checkpoints for new joiners — confirmation of employment
- Apply SMART objectives and evidence-based ratings in appraisals — performance and reward outcomes
- Test absence patterns and hold return-to-work conversations — attendance and wellbeing

- Specify fair investigation, grievance and disciplinary steps — dispute prevention and HR partners
- Communicate development and delegation choices to staff — team capability and succession

Key People Management Practice Terms

- Competency-based interview — a structured interview that asks for past examples of behaviour linked to the role's required competencies.
- Probation review — a formal checkpoint deciding whether a new employee is confirmed, extended or released.
- SMART objective — a goal that is specific, measurable, achievable, relevant and time-bound.
- Return-to-work discussion — a short meeting after absence to support the employee and understand any underlying cause.
- Natural justice — the principle that a person hears the case against them and responds before any decision.
- Performance improvement plan — a documented set of targets, support and review dates for an employee below standard.

- Run return-to-work discussions for every absence over the coming month and use the absence pattern analysis to agree any support or adjustments.

People Management Practice Questions FAQ

What is People Management Practice for line managers and why does it matter now?

People Management Practice is the set of hiring, appraisal, attendance, grievance and disciplinary tasks a line manager handles directly. It matters now because HR has moved to advisory roles and employees judge employers by their manager's fairness.

Which roles gain most from People Management Practice training?

Line managers, department heads and team leaders without an HR title gain most. You benefit if you interview candidates, run appraisals, manage absence or hold difficult conversations about conduct with your staff.

How does People Management Practice differ from a strategic HR management course?

It focuses on the manager's daily people decisions rather than HR strategy. A strategic HR course covers operating models, workforce planning and HR governance; this one builds interview, appraisal, absence and disciplinary skills for line managers.

What do you bring back from People Management Practice training?

You bring back a people management casebook with interview guides, appraisal evidence formats, improvement plan templates and hearing checklists. You also return with practised conversations for performance, absence and conduct cases.

People Management Practice: The Way Forward

The people management casebook is the work product participants take back. Its first use is in the next hiring or appraisal decision, where the manager and HR partner rely on its templates and records. After one review cycle, the casebook is worth revisiting with HR to compare outcomes across teams and tighten consistency in ratings and sanctions.
