Advanced Marketing Skills Training Course

Ref: 471_17136 Date: 17 – 28 January 2027 Location: Amman Fees: 5500 GBP

Marketing Skills is an advanced 2-week training course for marketing managers, brand executives and product marketers who turn customer insight into an Annual Marketing Plan with a sharp value proposition and a performance dashboard. Markets fragment into smaller segments while price comparison becomes instant, so firms that cannot choose where to compete and how to win lose margin to clearer rivals. Jupiter Prime Training offers this course to marketers moving from campaigns to marketing leadership.

Why Marketing Skills Matter Now

Three pressures shape marketing roles today: customers who switch brands after one poor experience, finance directors who question spend that cannot be linked to growth, and product portfolios that widen faster than budgets. A marketing function with strong segmentation, positioning and pricing discipline concentrates resources on the customers it can serve profitably, while a weak one spreads money thinly and competes on discounts. The course draws on segmentation, targeting and positioning STP, the extended marketing mix 7Ps, the jobs-to-be-done lens of customer need, and the Ansoff growth matrix, alongside a balanced set of marketing metrics.

Who Gains Most from Marketing Skills

- Managers accountable for a brand's annual objectives and budget
- Product marketers who set launch positioning and pricing for a portfolio line
- Brand executives who brief agencies and protect brand consistency
- Insight owners who commission research and translate it for decision-makers
- Channel and trade marketers who agree terms and activity with distributors and retailers

A brand or category team that writes one shared plan each year gains most when its brand, product and insight members attend together.

Marketing Skills Capabilities

Participants practise the judgement calls that separate a marketing leader from a campaign coordinator.

- Assess market attractiveness and competitive position for each segment — leadership choosing where to compete
- Design a value proposition and positioning statement for a target segment — brand teams briefing agencies
- Weigh product, price, place and promotion options against margin goals — product owners setting the mix
- Calculate price elasticity effects and channel margins — commercial directors approving price changes
- Specify marketing metrics from awareness to customer lifetime value — finance partners judging return
- Build an annual plan with objectives, budget phasing and a dashboard — boards signing off marketing investment

Key Marketing Skills Terms

- Segmentation — dividing a market into groups of buyers with similar needs, behaviours or characteristics that respond alike to marketing.
- Positioning — the distinct place a brand aims to hold in target customers' minds relative to competing offers.
- Value proposition — a clear statement of the benefits a target customer receives and why they exceed the alternatives.
- Marketing mix — the controllable choices of product, price, place and promotion, extended to people, process and physical evidence for services.
- Price elasticity — how strongly demand for an offer changes when its price rises or falls.
- Share of wallet — the portion of a customer's total spend in a category that goes to one brand.

Applying Marketing Skills After the Course

- Run a segment attractiveness scoring session with brand and sales colleagues and agree two priority segments for the coming year.
- Rewrite one brand's positioning statement and creative brief, then test the revised message with a small customer panel.

Marketing Skills Questions FAQ

What are advanced marketing skills and why do they matter now?

Advanced marketing skills are the decisions on segments, positioning, mix, pricing and metrics that steer a brand. They matter now because customers switch quickly and finance teams demand proof, so marketers must concentrate spend where they can win profitably.

Which roles gain most from advanced marketing skills training?

Marketing managers, product marketers and brand executives gain most. A consumer goods brand uses these skills to defend shelf position and price, while a business services firm in sectors such as banking or logistics uses them to target corporate accounts and position against competitors.

How does advanced marketing skills training differ from a digital marketing course?

Advanced marketing skills training focuses on strategic choices that come before channels. A digital marketing course concentrates on search, social and analytics execution; this course covers insight, segmentation, positioning, pricing, route to market and accountability across every channel.

What do you bring back from advanced marketing skills training?

You bring back a draft yearly plan for your brand or product line. It sets target segments, a positioning statement, mix and pricing decisions, budget phasing and a dashboard, ready for discussion with your manager and finance partner.

Marketing Skills: The Way Forward

The Annual Marketing Plan first informs which segments receive priority budget in the coming year. Brand managers, product marketers and finance partners use it to agree targets, price moves and campaign phasing. After the first quarterly review, the pricing assumptions deserve a second look, since early sales data often shows a different elasticity from the one the plan expected.
